MEMBERS REPORT

* John Bodel, Malcolm Bell and Stephen V. Tracy report that the American Academy in Rome is sponsoring the publication of a catalogue of ancient Greek and Latin inscriptions in the United States to coincide with the Eleventh International Congress on Greek and Latin Epigraphy (AIEGL), to be held in Rome in 1997. No such compilation has this country and the editors believe that the projected volume will serve as a useful work for teaching and research.

In addition to making known the existence of unedited inscriptions and the whereabouts of previously published texts, the catalogue will provide updated, bibliographical references and new readings of published inscriptions and, when possible, transcriptions and photographs of unpublished texts. The aim is to register all inscriptions on stone, metal, pottery, ceramic, wood and wax as well as mosaics, painted graffiti, signs, labels and the like (coin legends and texts written on papyri will not be included).

In order to make the catalogue as complete as possible, the editors welcome the assistance of all those who have knowledge of Greek and Latin inscriptions held in the United States. Museums, academic institutions and private collectors are particularly invited to make known to the project the nature of the epigraphic materials in their collections. We welcome information of any kind regarding texts inscribed in Greek or Latin, but it will be most helpful if a standardized form—multiple copies of which will be sent on request—is filled out for each inscription and returned to the address below. Photographs, if available, will be greatly appreciated. Please contact the U.S. Epigraphy Project, Department of Classics (DC), Rutgers University, New Brunswick, NJ 08903-0270.

* Eugene N. Borza reports: "A funny thing happened in Nashville. As our annual AAH banquet drew to its usual festive conclusion, President Carol Thomas assumed the podium and began some rambling comments about me. I was amused and flattered, as I had just passed my sixtieth birthday and was about to retire from Penn State after 31 years of service. It soon became apparent, however, that this tribute was more ambitious than I suspected. A Dixieland trumpet player emerged to tootle the melody of "Alexander's Ragtime Band," followed by new Latin verses to this venerable tune composed by Judy Hallett and her students. We were all forced to sing these new verses, led by a trio of female colleagues whose musical ability was no match for their enthusiasm and courage. At this point, my wife, Kathleen, appeared holding a book—not an uncommon sight, except for the fact that she was supposed to be home in central Pennsylvania. At last, I realized that something big was up.

"I was called to the podium. Approaching the front of the room, I looked at the volume in Kathleen's hands and thought, "Oh, god! they've done a Festschrift for me. That means I'll have to read the damned thing and respond kindly to all the authors, whether I like their contributions or not!" I discovered, to my surprise—and relief—that the book was in fact a collection of my own work, some fifteen articles on Macedonian topics, published in the period 1971-93.

"The volume, entitled Makedonika, and edited by Carol Thomas, was produced in complete secrecy from me, no mean feat, as dozens of persons—contribution, publishers, AAH officers, and a wife—had worked on the project for more than a year. It is a handsome volume in which a number of friends reminisce about our relationship over the years, and even said some nice things. I am deeply grateful to all the co-conspirators. Nothing could please me more than to be so honored by those persons whose friendship I have treasured above all for more than a quarter of a century: my colleagues in the Association of Ancient Historians."

(Ed. note: The author wishes to express his gratitude for the opportunity to contribute this note of thanks.)

* As Association archivist, Gene Borza further requests members to send to him (at 1108 Kay St., Boalsburg, PA 16827) any anecdotes they may have concerning previous AAH annual meetings.

* George Houston reports the formation of a new epigraphical organization, tentatively called The American Society of Greek and Latin Epigraphy. He urges interested AAH members to contact the organizer, B. Hudson McLean, Executive Director, ASGLE, St. John's College, University of Manitoba, 92 Dysart Road, Winnipeg, Manitoba R3T 2M5 Canada, e-mail: asgle@ccu.umanitoba.ca

* Konrad Kinzl reports the availability of a second edition, of Classical Studies in Canadian Universities. Requests for this directory should be sent to him at the Department of Classical Studies, Trent University, Peterborough, Ont. K9J 7B8 Canada, along with checks or money orders in the sum of CAD 5.00 payable to the Department of Ancient History and Classics, Trent University."

* Lucia Nixon, Simon Price and Charles Beesley report the completion of a video about their archaeological field survey at Sphakia, Crete, studying the environment and landscape and reconstructing human activity there from circa 3000 B.C.E. until 1900 C.E. The 50-minute tape devotes approximately half its length to field methods and half to results. For further information contact Educational Technology Resources Center, 37 Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JF, tel. 0-1865-270530; FAX 0-1865-270527.

* Carol Thomas reports: "As more than 120 of you know through experience, the annual meeting in Nashville was a model of efficient organization, fine sessions, bonhomie and surprise (described above). Anyone who knows Bob Drews expects this quality in all of his projects. We extend special thanks to Bob, Tom McGinn, Tim Winters and the entire committee of hosts at Vanderbilt University.

an invitation, Kurt Raaflaub is preparing guidelines for the organization of an annual meeting. Several previous organizers responded to a request for suggestion and Kurt—host of the 1989 meeting—agreed to compile a guide. It will be available soon. If you would like a copy, please contact Kurt or me.

“We can expect an invitation from Richard Mitchell, University of Illinois/Urbana to meet at the Mansion House at Allerton Park in 1998. As Richard describes the setting, ‘the grounds of the estate are vast, some formal gardens
and many interesting areas over which we can wander...
softball is even possible for Jack Cargill & Co., if desired.’
The Mansion has been booked provisionally upon our receiving and accepting a formal invitation at the next annual meeting.

“One outcome of the business meeting at Vanderbilt is the establishment of a home page for the Association on World Wide Web. Enthusiasm for the benefits of using electronic technology expressed at that meeting pushed us to add this means of communication to our existing veciles—please note ‘add to’ not ‘substitute for!’ My own non-expert status shows in the textual format of the page.
I am grateful to the experts present at Nashville and especially to John Nichols (University of Oregon) and Shawn Ross (graduate student at the University of Washington) for the actual implementation. The AAH homepage address is: http://weber.u.washington.edu/lclio/ahh

“Over time, we will add links to other data. John Nicols is planning one link and when the directory of graduate programs in ancient history is ready for circulation, a link seems one way of sharing this information.

“May eagles fly on your right as the academic year begins.”
